A: You can do it with a simple awk script: awk '/' |'/Section1/ { print substr($0, 33), "-" } |'/Section2/ { print substr($0, 43), "-" }' With your example input: $ cat f Section1 Name=VANESSA Version=VA Package=vane Filename=v_jan_a1a_gsa100 Package=VANESSA Package=VA Section2 Section2 Name=VALERIE Version=VA Package=valr Filename=v_jan_a1a_gsa100 Package=VALERIE Package=VA You need to put this after awk to make it work: $ sed's/.\{33\}/&-/' f Section1-vane Section1-v_jan_a1a_gsa100 Section2-VALERIE Section2-v_jan_a1a_gsa100 A: Here's a solution with no external commands but only awk. awk '/Section1/{if(f)print substr($0, 33, f), "-"; ++f} /Section2/{if(f)print substr($0, 43, f), "-"}' file The solution starts in every lines with Section1, where we enter the fields separating by =. We create a field f in which we place the number of bytes to skip. Then, in the next lines (Section2) we skip bytes in lines in which f is not 0. The substr command returns from beginning to the first occurrence of -. To check the results, you can use this script awk '/Section1/{if(f)print substr($0, 33, f), "-"; ++f} /Section2/{if(f)print substr($0, 43, f), "-"}' file It should be added that you can implement the check for f = 0 in awk in the following way awk '/Section1/{if(f++>1)print substr($0, 33), "-"; } d0c515b9f4
