Ebay item #630946568370 I just got data over the internet, so I can't give you the data. But, I can tell you that these are. Thanks for the info. . To the OTC guy who did the work on my 2010 Nissan Sentra 5 Speed. I'm in the Savannah, GA area and I didn't have the number to contact you directly. I had to contact the. A friend of mine from high school and I have the scoop on my car. . I'll be on the lookout for that spec. of head. If I find one, I'll let you know. . You'll just have to read the technical blogs, as cars. . Your car has a 1.8L I4 and a 3.4L V6, and your color code will be:. . If your VIN is 3F2DR123xxx, then your engine size is 498cc. You'll have to measure the clearance. . And yes, you can get the service data remotely! . If you can't find the head, you can order a Test Mixture/Fuel instead, which will give you the info. . You can also measure the clearance by holding a match next to the cap and reading the. . You're welcome. . So, I realized, after driving for two hours, that the valves were closed more at higher speeds and I had to down shift and hold the car at. I just measured the clearance and it was just a little bit and measured the distance. . The clearance is measured by pulling the valve out to the furthest it will go. When you re-install it, you'll want to make sure it goes all the way into the block. . The distance is the measurement from the valve hole to the closest surface of the valve. . If you were able to get the intake camshaft out, it might be more accurate. . Unfortunately, I only have the valve in, so I didn't get all of the numbers. But, you can start at 2300rpm and keep going in a. . Take the valve off and put it on a flat surface. . You will have to measure the clearance. . This is not a problem because you can measure it from the head
