I was wondering if there was a nice way to allow a user to register through a website and have their new username and email be randomly generated. My database is MySQL if it makes a difference. I am simply outputting a html page that includes an input text field for their username and a text field for their email. How would I go about this? A: SELECT concat(username, '@localhost', RAND()) as username, concat(email, '@localhost', RAND()) as email FROM users Is that what you're looking for? If not, try: SELECT CONCAT(username, '@localhost', RAND(), '.', 1+RAND()) as username, CONCAT(email, '@localhost', RAND(), '.', 2+RAND()) as email FROM users This will give you a unique username and email combination. This code would be run in a new query to generate a new user's username and email. RAND() will generate a number between 0 and RAND_MAX inclusive. RAND_MAX is normally 32768 (That's usually plenty for any site you'd ever design. Or you could just limit the field to 256 characters, if you think that's too long. You

Mating and Parturition of the Oval, Pearl-Spotted, Pink-Footed and Bluish-Tipped Swimmers (Dolichopodidae: Atherinomorpha) of the Eastern Pacific Ocean. In the eastern Pacific, there are five species of dolichopodid fish: Oval-spotted, Pearl-spotted, Bluish-tipped, Pink-foot and white-spotted species. The species are found in waters of very low salinity (ESUCS) and 5-20°C. A.O. Inoue (1947) reported the ovulation of Pearl-spotted in mid-May, pink-foot in mid-June and White-spotted in mid-August. B.S. Boone (1962) hypothesized that Pearl-spotted did not ovulate until after the spawning of Steno bredkorni and White-spotted did not mature until after the spawning of A.O. Inoue. The species described above have life histories composed of relatively long gestation and protogynous hermaphroditism. However, morphological differences between the species with respect to the testes, ovaries and reproductive ducts are not well-established in most cases. Reproductive ducts of Pearl-spotted and Bluish-tipped are twisted; those of Oval-spotted, Pink-foot and white-spotted are straight. Pearl-spotted can spawn in the summer. Pearl-spotted are small and live long. Other species with small body size and low fecundity are known. A.O. Inoue (1947) suggested that the high fecundity was the largest factor in the distribution of the Pearl-spotted. White-spotted is caught by large trawlers and is rarely collected from drop-net (chinook) trawl fishing. Oval-spotted are large and drift naturally. They are caught by trawler and are the least collected of the species.
