St. Louis Cardinals outfielder Jhonny Peralta will undergo surgery on his partially torn achilles tendon on Thursday, sources told ESPN.com's Alden Gonzalez. Peralta is expected to miss more than eight weeks, according to the sources. The surgery could be performed by Dr. William Farhat, the same surgeon who repaired Matt Holliday's achilles tendon last season. Holliday, out for the rest of the season, said last month that he expects to begin running on a treadmill on Monday. "I'm not going to give you an exact timeline," Farhat said at the time. "But I don't think I'd be making a mistake if I said, 'Give it at least four weeks.'" General manager John Mozeliak said in December that the Cardinals don't feel Peralta is a long-term candidate to return to the lineup. Peralta was bothered during the Cardinals' first series in St. Louis this week and at one point appeared to be favoring his right leg, but he appeared to be favoring his left leg on Wednesday. This has been a tough season for Peralta, who was limited to just six games after signing a seven-year, $52.5 million contract extension in January. The 31-year-old outfielder will have surgery Thursday, according to a source, and will be re-evaluated in four weeks. Manager Mike Matheny said on Tuesday that outfielder Matt Holliday will likely start his rehab assignment next week and the team has to be careful that the rest isn't overkill. "I don't think that's the kind of thing that you want to do at all," Matheny said. "So you've got to be careful." The Cardinals also considered Wednesday the last day available to option Peralta or attempt to work him into the rotation, but Matheny ruled out the idea.
